Glimpses of the Webinar

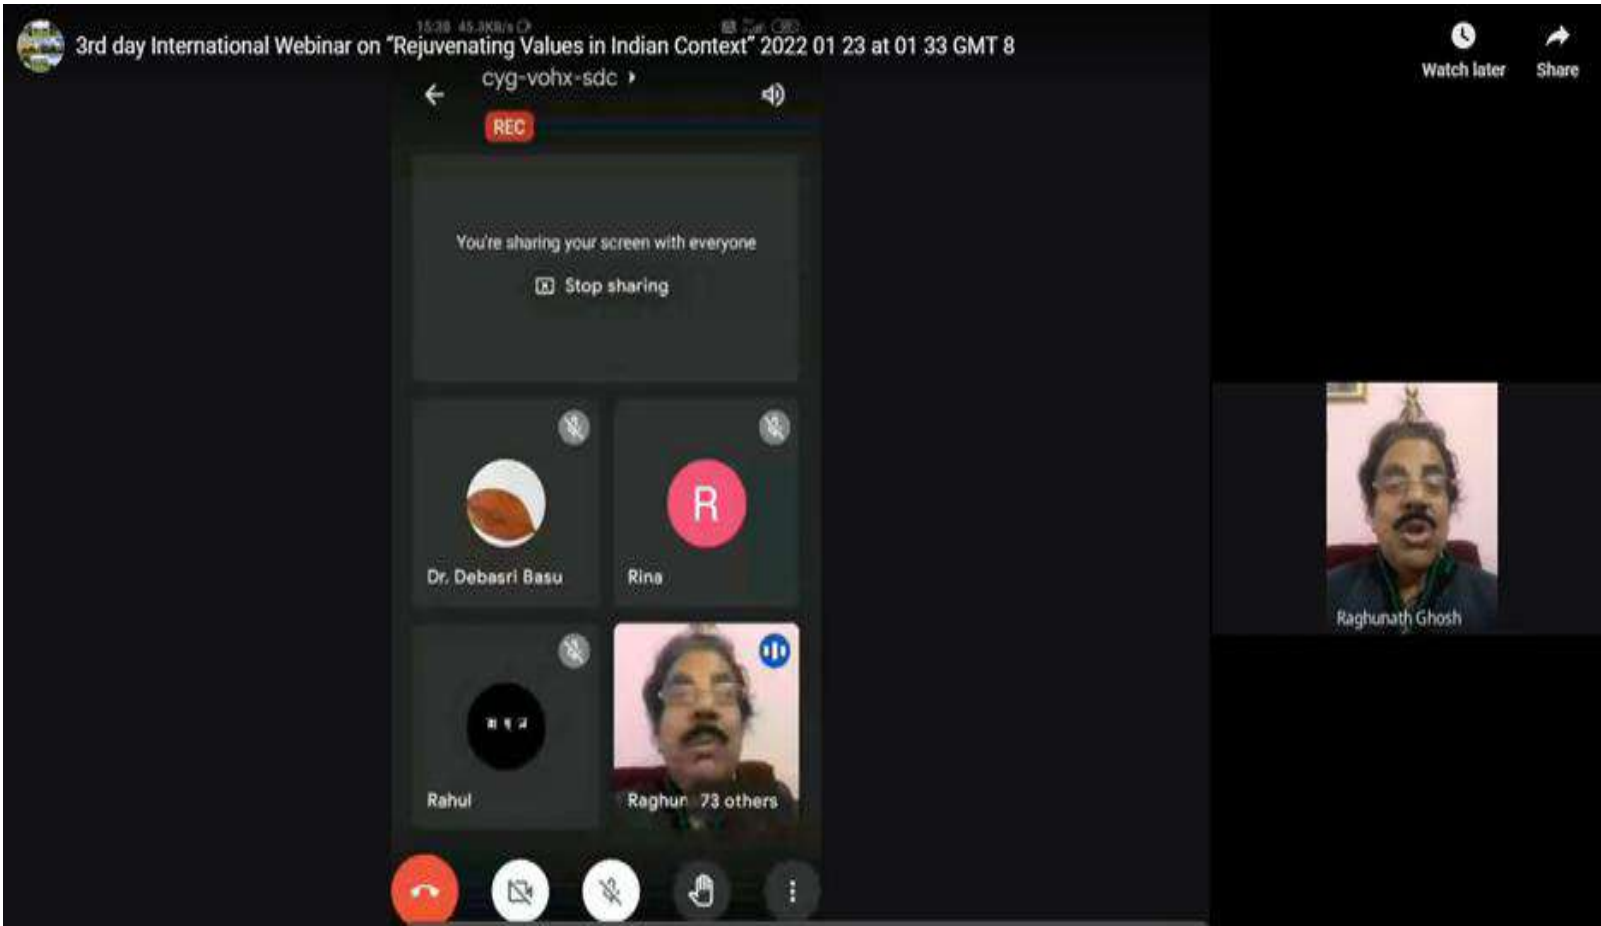

THE SECULAR-NON-SECULAR DIVIDE

- The distancing of religion is almost essential to protect individual citizens from their own oppressive religiously sanctioned social customs.
- To identify the conceptual structure of secularism, it is best to begin by contrasting it with theocracy.
- The anti-secular doctrines favour not separation but a union or alliance between religion and state. A state that has union with a particular religious order is a theocratic state. Such a state is governed by what it claims are divine laws directly administered by a priestly order claiming divine commission.
